

FOOD FOR FANS.

As we go to press we say of the Cuban Stars that they came, they saw, but have not yet altogether conquered. However, Saturday's and Sunday's games looked rather indicative of the little fellow's victory of the series. But you never can tell just what will happen in baseball, the wonderfully speculative game. The four contests already played merely signify that two good teams have been in the field. There has been none of the small time stuff seen on other fields, expert playing has been the vogue.

The Cubans without question are one of the strongest of baseball aggregation. They have got the great thing in baseball that the darker race should have in general—scientific mass movement. Notwithstanding that that all these fellows are star players, yet they consider themselves as units functioning each in his orbit or sphere.

but all moving to one end. This is probably the why they play the stalwart Monarchs closer than any other team in the league. The standing of the series is as follows:

The Cubans won Saturday—7 to 1.
Cubans won Sunday—6 to 2. Monarchs won Monday—5 to 4. Monarchs won Tuesday—4 to 3.

The Kansas City Sun, Kansas City, Missouri
Saturday, September 25, 1920, Page 8, Column 4