

GIANTS GET OFF BAD; LEAGUERS DOWN THEM IN OPENER.

By Dave Wyatt.

Tom Williams' wildness, Reese and Bobby Williams' misjudgment of batted balls, coupled with the inability of Foster's gang to bring the ball, proved the undoing of the Chicago representative of the Western Circuit of the Negro National League. Tommy Williams had a little too much stuff on his heating and the ball went wild often enough to get the star into a hole from which he never recovered until his gang was beaten. The fielding of the Giants was up to the standard and only for the heavy gale that swept the grounds, Reese and Williams, no doubt, would have handled the chances which were offered them successfully; as it was, along about the fifth after a couple of bobbles, etc., had filled up the stations, a leaguer worked Tom for a base, forcing in a run and then some husky chap near cleared the stations with a drive. The Colored boys failed to hit after the first round, and they also failed to score. Marshall, the K. C. recruit, unfurled rare form and had the leaguers doing some mighty funny stunts trying to hit his fast shoots and snake like curves. Marshall looks and impresses in a manner that abodes no good for the batters who face him this season. Wriggin, a new infielder, displayed streaks of cunning greatness and got in good with the fans. Foster has a world of good playing material. They all field and throw well; just how good they can hit as yet to be found out and what they will do on the bases is another question. Anyhow, the big manager has two more yet to come and they are reported as finds; so there is no fear of the Giants not being able to live up to past good deeds. Next Sunday, April 18, they tackle one of Chicago's best clubs, the Magnets, and we should learn a whole lot about the Giants in that game, as well as the series they are now playing out. The old heads, such as Grant, DeMoss, Dixon and Gans are going just about as of old. Now if the new men come through, we may have some real live news of the Foster gang soon.
