

WHITWORTH GOES

Richard Whitworth, pitching ace of the American Giants, said good-bye to his many Chicago friends last Sunday, when he left for Detroit, Mich., where he will play the coming season as a member of the Detroit Stars. There is no denying the fact that Whitworth is today one of the greatest pitchers in the game; he has met and defeated all the crack clubs of both races, beating such twirlers as Cyclone Williams, Cannon Ball Redding, Padron, Cockrell, Tom Williams and others of that high type. When Rube Foster handed the great player his transportation it was plainly evident that the latter realized what a loss to his team was taking place, but in his usual good natured way said:

"I hope that you have even better success in Detroit than you have had with me."

Whit, as we call him, was idolized by the fans and it is a certainty that when the Stars play here this summer he will be given a royal welcome by his legion of friends.

Chicago Defender, Chicago, IL

Saturday, April 3, 1920, Page 9, Column 5