

The St. Louis Giants are busy with preparations for what looks to be the greatest season in the history of their career. The stands and general seating capacity has been increased more than a thousand over last year's accommodations, and the reservations for boxes are turning in at a good rate of speed. Mills has given the St. Louisans an unusually good-looking team, and under the able tutelage of Dick Wallace are expected to more than hold their own with the best that exist. Hill, Scott and Blackwell are a trio of outfielders that are not surpassed by any on the circuit. The infield, with McAdoo at first and Brooks, with the recruits, presents a formidable front. Pitcher Luther is bound to shine, as he electrified the East last season. Drake, Oldham and Finer are a bunch of speed artists that will show well in any kind of going, while the catching staff, with Cobb and Kennard, looks good to hold with any that may be trotted out.

Chicago Defender, Chicago, IL

Saturday, April 17, 1920, Page 9, Column 3