

Dave Malarcher, the spectacular third baseman of the Chicago champs, ran afoul of a pair of mighty sharp spikes, sustaining a very severe wound in his hand. He is out of the lineup at present and is undergoing treatment at Provident hospital. Wriggins, a flashy youngster, will cavort around the third station during Dave's absence.

Chicago Defender, Chicago, IL

Saturday, April 24, 1920, Page 9, Column 1