
BASEBALL.

Seldom has Washington looked forward to an athletic event with as much interest as the local populace is looking forward to the baseball games to be played next Monday and Tuesday between the great Cuban Stars, of Havana, and the celebrated Lincoln Giants, of New York. Indications are that a record-breaking crowd will greet these two wonderful colored teams when they take the field in what is generally regarded as the most important "big league" series to be played in the East this season by colored teams, save the regular colored world's series which will be played in New York or in Washington the latter part of September.
