

FOSTER VISITS GOTHAM

Andrew Rube Foster, the western John McGraw of baseball, blew into the city last Sunday from Philadelphia, where he was royally entertained by many old friends. Rube's business in Philly was to look over the new Madison Athletic baseball park at 34th and Reed streets. From all reports the new field is a knockout. While in Gotham, Rube was in conference with James A. Kelly of the Capital City Giants, Washington, D. C.; Conde Savage and Jeff Tesreau, representing Dyckman Oval; John Connors, Nat Strong and others. While not authoratively stated, it is thought that many of the western teams under Rube's control will be sent to New York on off-dates after June to play at Dyckman Oval on Sundays and Saturdays. When the wizard was approached on the subject he was mum. If such should be the case, eastern baseball fans will have an opportunity of seeing the American Giants, A. B.

Chicago Defender, Chicago, IL

Saturday, May 1, 1920, Page 11, Columns 4 and 5