
Last evening the Warren baseball team crossed bats with Brown's Tennessee Rats, an aggregation which travels with a colored minstrel troupe. The Warren boys were beaten by a score of 6 to 0, but they deserve great credit for holding the "rats" down as well as they did. The colored players, says the manager of the mnistrels, are being paid $700 per month to play ball and are always in practice and are very good players, and the Warren players, who besides playing ball for pastime, work all day long at other work, need not be ashamed of being beaten by the Rats.

We advise the Warren boys to get some rat "pizen" next time they tackle this aggregation.
