

Semi-Pro Ball Season Coming Near Its Close

The most successful semi-pro baseball season of a decade will come to an end a week from to-day, when the final games in the Manhattan-Bronx championship series will be played.

These games will bring together the Lincoln Giants and Jeff Tesreau's Bears. The teams will play two games at Dyckman Oval, near the Dyckman Street subway station, this afternoon, and two more the following Sunday at the same grounds. The teams have met four times this season and broke even.

New York Tribune, New York, NY

Sunday, October 24, 1920, Page 18, Column 7