

ROYALS AND CUBANS CLASH

This afternoon at 4:15 o'clock at Riverview Field, the Poughkeepsie Cubans and the Royal Giants, of Brooklyn, will come together in the second game of the series. The teams were to have played yesterday, but shortly before game time rain set in and festivities were called off.

The game this afternoon will see "Stringbean" Williams, the star hurler of the visitors, and Ballesteros, the opposing pitchers. Williams started the Tuesday game against the locals, but after throwing five balls retired. He claims his arm is in shape for today's contest and with the "elongated one" in shape, the locals will have to go at top speed all the way.

Same old story.

Rain caused the postponement of the second game of the Cubans-Royal Giants series.

The same teams will meet this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. The final clash of the series will be played at Riverview Field tomorrow afternoon, the game being called at 3:30 o'clock.

Today's contest will see "Straining-Deen" Williams and Ballesteros the opposing pitchers. The former is considered one of the best pitchers in the country. He started Tuesday's game against the locals, but retired when his arm failed to respond. He claims his arm is all right and with their star hurler in shape the Royals hope for victory.
