

Foster, the well known manager of the American Giants, of Chicago, is equally as well known for his reliability. After gathering fame he decided to go into vaudeville as many do who get their names up. Here is what is seen in print concerning his advent into his new field of vaudeville. Andrew Foster, the best colored ball player, Chicago, who began his theatrical career in Cleveland, attempted to show how he won exhibition game from the White Sox on the side, ended by falling into the orchestra and put the entire orchestra in confusion. The instruments that were not broken could not be played because the musicians who played them had to be carried out, as they laughed into hysterics. The audience loudly rolled on the floor and said they would freely pay for going out of the house as they were well satisfied.

Considerable talk has followed the announcement that C. I. Taylor, of the West Baden Sprudels would manage the A. B. C's of Indianapolis for the year 1914. Taylor is known for his ball generalship. This gives rise to the belief that he will be doing great things when he gets in. The A. B. C's spring training will be March 25th.

Indianapolis Freeman, Indianapolis, IN

Saturday, February 28, 1914, Page 7, Column 1