ED. CICOTTE HAS NO SUPERIORS.

(By Wm. Buckner)

Eddie Cicotte, the idol of Chicago's baseball fans, has shown more class under the schooling of Kid Gleason than he has for the last two or three years.

Cicotte is a wonderful pitcher. I trained him for seven years and know him as only few do. He belongs to the old school of pitchers that are fast passing out of the world of sportdom.

He belongs in the class of Ed. Walsh, Cy Young, Christy Mathewson, who made their records not with brawny arms alone, but with brainy heads.

They study the game scientifically, watching for the likes and dislikes of the real batters and have enviable records of giving them the ones they do not want, and cannot hit.

Every batter has a weakness. If a pitcher watches him closely and discovers it at the same time he is able to serve him accordingly. It will be just as impossible for the batter to hit safely as for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle.

Baseball is a business and is to be studied seriously, if any success is to be made, Cicotte realized this years ago, and to the realization of this fact he owes his success. Nobody ever saw Ci-cotte eating peanuts and kidding the mascot while he was in a game. I was delighted to see Wingfield, Rube Foster's ace in the game with Detroit. He studied his men carefully as they faced him, and when he had them at his mercy, with no one on base, he would let up a little and save his arm, but when a man reached first base he would settle down and pitch as if he was the only man in the game.

My advice to aspiring pitchers is to watch Eddie Cicotte in action. You may learn something.
